

In the lower deciles, the share of households with loans is higher than in the eurozone, while in the highest decile, it is lower than in the eurozone.

Figure 6
The Share of Households with Loans by Income Deciles, Israel and the Eurozone<sup>a</sup>, 2013–16 (percent)

<sup>a</sup> Eurozone countries excluding Lithuania and plus Poland and Hungary. The data on European countries are for 2013–15. The data for Israel are for 2016.

SOURCE: Eurozone–Eurosystem Household Finance and Consumption Survey, second wave (European Central Bank); Israel–based on Central Bureau of Statistics.